THE ANSWER. BY JOHN G. WHITTIER. Spare me, dread angel of reproof, And let the sunshine weave to-day Its gold-threads in the warp and woof Of life so poor and grey.

Spare me awhile: the flesh is weak. These lingering feet, that fain would stray Among the flowers, shall some day seek The straight and narrow way.

Take off thy ever-watchful eye, The awe of thy rebuking frown; The dullest slave at times must sigh To fling his burdens down;

To drop his galley's straining oar, And press, in summer warmth and calm, The lap of some enchanted shore Of blossom and of balm.

Grudge not my life its hour of bloom, My heart its taste of long desire; This day be mine: be those to come As duty shall require.

The deep voice answered to my own, Smiting my selfish prayers away: "To-morrow is with God alone, And man hath but to-day.

"Say not thy fond, vain heart within, The Father's arms shall still be wide When from these pleasant way of sin Thou turn'st at eventide.'

"Cast thyself down," the tempter saith, "And angels shall thy feet upbear." He bids thee make a lie of faith, A blasphemy of prayer.

Though God be good and free be Heaven, No force divine can love compel; And, though the song of sins forgiven May sound through lowest hell,

The sweet persuasion of His voice Respects thy sanctity of will. He giveth day: thou hast thy choice To walk in darkness still;

As one who, turning from the light, Watches his own grey shadow fall, Doubting, upon his path of night, If there be day at all!

No word of doom may shut thee out, No wind of wrath may downward whirl, No swords of fire keep watch about The open gates of pearl. A tenderer light than moon or sun,

Than song of earth a sweeter hymn, May shine and sound forever on, And then be deaf and dim.

Forever round the Mercy-seat The guiding lights of Love shall burn; But what if, habit-bound, thy feet Shall lack the will to turn?

What if thine eye refuse to see, Thine ear of Heaven's free welcome fail, And thou a willing captive be, Thyself thy own dark jail?

O doom beyond the saddest guess, As the long years of God unroll To make thy dreary selfishness The prison of a soul!

To doubt the love that fain would break The fetters from thy self-bound limb; And dream that God can thee forsake As thou forsakest Him!

Ladies' Dresses in Paris.

The dresses over silk slips are all the rage at the present moment in Paris, and every one-knows what pretty and effective tollets white muslin and tarlatan prove over blue pink and mauve silk skirts. The thin shirts are trimmed this year with either a bouillon or a flounce ornamented with lines of jusertion sewn on at regular intervals so as to form slauting lines. These lines are either guipure or Valenciennes lined with silk; embroidered straps are like wise used, but they are more costly, as they have to be worked expressly. This trimming is, of course, for white evening dresses, as for morning wear black grenadine and white alpaca are worn over colored silk slips. The effect is very pretty, not in the least heavy, and decidedly novel. Both the grenadine and alpaca dresses are trimmed with tongue-shaped straps of the same material piped all round with satin. These straps are all cut-separately; they do not require much material, but a good deal of time, which is a matter of calculation only with those who make their dresses at home. materials are likewise trimmed with rouleaux sewn at each side of the straps two inches wide. Gimp and let are naturally too heavy for such light fabries; but they are still in high favor for thick silks.

Ribbon sashes are only worn with mus in and gauze dresses; for silks, failles, etc., they are made of the same material, corded all round, or otherwise edged. The ends are very long and very wide, and are fastened either at the side of the back, or arranged so as to loop up the skirt.

I foresee a great invasion of gold in ladles' tollets, and more especially in the still favor to black toilet; it commenced on bonnets, but it is not at all likely to be stationary there. It is very pretty, and up to the present time "very well worn," Bonnets of all varieties are black and gold, from the fanchon, embroi-dered with jet, to the toquet, tilted over the nose, which as now worn, is a perfect carica-ture. A gold spray has quite dethroned the algrette; its leaves may be seen on every lady's hat, either standing upright, or lying down on black velvet or black lace bows. The most fashionable leaves are those of the olive, the oak, and the laurel; small marguerites and buttercups are also worn, and all these are made in dead gold, bright gold being only used for such fruits as bunches of grapes and currants, or for evening head dresses. Foliage is also made of simple gold paper at a very cheap rate; so the great fear is that this pretty adornment will soon become very common .- Correspondence

Sewing Machine Facts.

The following interesting statistics we gather from the quarterly returns made, we believe, under oath, by the several manufacturers of sewing machines throughout the United States. The figures which we present, and which we have been at some pains to collect, show at giance the wonderful growth and great importance of this branch of American manufactures It will be observed that one company has produced and sold within the year over forty-three thousand machines! It is somewhat remarkable that, during the recent stagnation in trade, this business has been but slightly, if at all, affected. But below are the figures in detail:-Sewing machines manufactured and sold as quarterly returns, for the year ending Handkerchief Flirtations.

Some genius has recently reduced to a system Some genius has recently reduced to a system the popular habit of getting up firstations by means of handkerchiefs. The language of flowers is out of date. It is too elaborate and roundabout a mode of conveying the tender emotions. Commend us to the handkerchief. The use of it is so handy, so natural, and so easily acquired, that any one who has tried it will at once perceive its advantages over the old complicated system. The handkerchief, too, is suggestive in connection with firstations. Think of plicated system. The handkerchief, too, is suggestive in connection with firtations. Think of the troubles that poor Desdemons got into by not taking proper care of that ill-starred handkerchief which the Egyptian woman gave to old Mrs. Othello. Truly, as his Moorship remarked, "there's magic in the web of it." Let anyone look in of a Saturday afternoon, to the matiness at some of our theatres, and be will say there is vast deal of meaning in a handkerchief. But hitherto it has been an unwritten language, and those who use it have known but little of its those who use it have known but little of its rundamental principles. Hence the many mistakes and misconceptions which too often follow just as with two persons conversing in a lan guage with which both are untamillar. The following key may serve as a useful guide to the young of both sexes who are ambilious to acquire this elegant accomplishment:— Drawing across the lips—Desirous of getting

Drawing across the eyes—I am sorry.
Taking by centre—You are too willing,
Dropping—We will be iriende.
Twirling in both hands—Indifference. Drawing across the check-I love you. Drawing through the hands-I hate you. Letting it rest on the right check-Yes. Letting it rest on the left cheek—No.
Twiring in left hand—I wish to get rid of you.
Twirling in right hand—I love another.
Folding it—I wish to speak with you,
Over the shoulder—Follow me. Opposition corners in both hards - Wait or me.

Drawing across the forehead—We are watched,
Placing on left car—I have a message for you.

Letting it remain on the eye—You are cruel,
Winding it round fore-finger—I am engaged.

The Rings on the Oak. A correspondent of the London Daily News, m the course of a letter with reference to a historical and legendary tree known as "Herne's Cak," gives not only some interesting facts about the tree itself, but also an explanation of a natural phenomenon in connection with it. He says:"While working up a portion of this memo-"While working up a portion of this memorable tree into covers for the book I have written on its identity, looking on the end, I observed a great peculiarity, namely:—The annular rings accumulated in a healthy and vigorous manner up to a certain point, when they suddenly ceased, became almost imperceptible, then increased again in size till they attained nearly their former width, afterwards gradually diminished towards the outer edge of the tree, where they finally became undistinguishable.

ished towards the outer edge of the tree, where they finally became undistinguishable.

"Upon mentioning this phenomenon to an in telligent gardener of fifty years' experience—without informing him in what wood I had observed it—he said the tree must have been struck by lightning or blighted in some way, so as to have stopped its growth, otherwise such an appearance would not have been presented. It was in the nature of trees, as it was with us, when they arrived at maturity they began to decline, the same as we did, but it was generally a gradual process, the rings in the trunk would become smaller and smaller by degrees, as the sap flowed less and less up the tree.

"I have since examined the wood more closely, and from the healthy part of the tree to the outside of the piece I have counted one hundred and sixty-four annular rings. If to these are added twenty for the sap which was wasted away from it, and forty one years, which time at least it is known to have been dead, we are carried back as far as 1639 as the latest time when the tree would have been scared or blighted. How much earlier than this it may when the tree would have been seared or blighted. How much earlier than this it may have been I am not in a position at present to prove; but, considering that the rings are so small as to be scarcely discernible, and that some of the outer portion of the tree has been wasted away, I submit that it is not a very pre-po-terous idea to assume it not improbable that the blasting of it happened during Shakespeare's

The Russian Imperial Household.

In Russia the Imperial household appears aunually in the budget for about 7,700,000 roubles; but its account with the treasury is invariably overdrawn by 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 roubles making the total amount derived from the public revenues about 1,500,000 sterling. Tuis sum includes about 250,000 roubles annually Chapter of the Imperial Orders of Knighthcod for pensions, etc., and a sum of nearly 2,000,000 of roubles for the support of various charitable institutions, and in general for what may be called privy purse expenditure. More than 506,000 roubles figure in the budget for extraordinary expenses, while the theatres and some other establishments, de-pendent on the Minister of the Imperial House hold, required, in 1866, a sum of 685,627 roubles. The imperial court and the administration of Its many palaces is estimated in 1866 to cost 3,924,495 roubles, exclusive of a sum of 462,000 roubles appropriated to her Majesty the press, the heir apparent and other children of their imperial majesties. But the sum of £1,500,000 sterling is but a portion of the total annual expenditure of the Court of Russia. The imperial family are in possession of vast estate which yield about 4,600,000 roubles, in addition to gold and other mines in Siberia, which, gether with the tribute of certain tribes in Siberia, bring in a further sum of 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 of roubles, or 6,000,000 roubles ($4,750,000) in all. The revenue of the imperial family is thus equal to about £2,450,000 annum, of which, however, £450,600 is spent in charities, schools, theatres, and other matters.
